

ABSTRACT

In one embodiment, a hybrid stream cipher operating within a computing device. The hybrid stream cipher comprises at least two software routines. A first routine is 5 responsible for dividing incoming plain text into variable-sized blocks. A second software routine is for converting the plain text into cipher text based on an encryption key, an internal identifier and perhaps a percentage of random data value.

2019P001 - 60 -